

OhMiBod Revolutionizes Personal Massager Experience with their iPhone® App, debuting at the 2011 Consumer Electronics Show (CES)

January 6, 2011 (Las Vegas, NV) – OhMiBod, creator of the original music driven vibrator, continues to drive the evolution of the pleasure products industry with the January 6-9 CES launch of the OhMiBod app – an innovative personal massager interface that allows users to create their own pleasure with the iPhone®, iPad™, and iPod touch®. Compatible with the entire range of OhMiBod products, this is the first app designed to remotely control vibrators and is available for $3.99 on the iTunes App StoreSM

OhMiBod's app is responsive to touch and movement, leaving control quite literally at the customer's fingertips," said Suki Dunham, founder of OhMiBod. "Gone are the days of cycling through speed, intensity, and pattern variations. With our app, users can change their experiences on the fly and in real time."

Designed by a woman, the app is ideal for use both alone and with a partner. Since vibrators are controlled remotely, couples can add a new element to sex play with an infinite range of vibrations and patterns. Dunham notes that this exclusive brand of creative freedom is a revolutionary step toward turning OhMiBod's line of personal massagers into fully customizable self-pleasure devices.

"One of OhMiBod's key missions is ensuring that customers enjoy new experiences each time they use one of our products," Dunham said. "The OhMiBod app is a game changer in this regard. It opens the doors to an entirely unique and interactive way of controlling OhMiBod pleasure products."
